6th Edition of the International Congress on Human Rights and Globalization

Immigration, Vulnerability, and Human Rights at the Southern Border of the EU

University of La Laguna, April 10-11, 2025

The call for abstracts for DDHHGLOBAL 2025 (the 6th International Congress on Human Rights and Globalization) is now open. The congress will be held at the University of La Laguna (Tenerife – Canary Islands) on April 10-11, 2025. There is also an option to participate online on April 9. You can submit your abstract by January 31, 2025.

DDHHGLOBAL 2025 aims to foster an international debate on Immigration, Vulnerability, and Human Rights at the Southern Border of the EU. Located on this southern European border, frontier territories like the Canary Islands serve as entry points for thousands of migrants, highlighting a humanitarian crisis of terrifying proportions that European public opinion cannot ignore.

Migration today is not only a high-priority subject of study but also a moral imperative in the current context of rising hate speech, xenophobia, and populism. An interdisciplinary analysis of migration is urgently needed to propose solutions through collaboration between society and academia, avoiding any hint of political demagoguery.

This edition proposes discussions on European migration and asylum policies, the socioeconomic impacts of immigration, multicultural coexistence models, global justice, the media's handling of migration processes, and the fight against disinformation and hate speech. There will also be room to address other general human rights issues, such as the impact of artificial intelligence on civil liberties, basic income, or international human rights protection systems. Submitted papers may be published in leading scientific journals, such as the International Journal of Political Thought, or by top-tier publishers like Dykinson, subject to blind peer review.
